

High Demand for MSc

Contributed by Centre for Human Ecology
Wednesday, 15 March 2006

Applications for the MSc in Human Ecology are at an all time high. "We already have 13 applications for 20 places and it's only March," explained Verene Nicolas, CHE fellow and course coordinator.

"This is really encouraging and demonstrates how the profile of the course is continuing to grow. However, spaces are limited and we don't want anyone to miss out because they don't apply soon enough."

The MSc in Human Ecology is offered through a partnership between CHE and the department of Geography and Sociology at the University of Strathclyde in Glasgow.

The MSc brings together head, heart and hand and is for people taking responsibility and initiative for effecting enduring change for sustainability and justice.

The course can be studied over one or two years and postgraduate diploma and certificate courses are also available. Information about the course and links to relevant University of Strathclyde pages are here.